Can I read and understand fictional texts?

Think back to when we looked at writing lists in a sentence. We learned that a comma is used to split adjectives and nouns up. Look at the sentences below and add a comma in the correct place.

Where should the commas be in the sentences?

Christopher sailed to North America South America and Europe.

The sailors were hungry cold and frightened.

The crew took cheese wine and water.

Christopher promised to bring back spices gold and fantastic tales.

Christopher was adventurous brave and fearless.

Today we are going to look at fictional text.

What is a fictional text?

A fictional text is something that has been made up. It can have some facts in it.

Top tips-

- Read the text first and try to understand what it is telling you.
- Underline any key words that you think may be important.
- Read the question carefully and understand what it is asking you.

Well done! Now here is an extra challenge if you are up for it.

- Imagine you have just met Christopher Columbus after he has returned from his voyage.
- What sorts of questions would you ask him?
